

DPT Monthly Newsletter

Hello! We hope this newsletter finds you all healthy. What a lot has changed in the past month! While we have had to put our program offerings on hold, we are actively working behind the scenes to find ways to reach the public virtually through our website and social media. Be sure to take a look at some of our options below, from cooking to touring the Donaldson-Bannister Farm and learning some Dunwoody history. As we add more, we will keep you up to date!

Stay safe!

Lemonade Days

UPDATE:

Twenty-one years ago, Dunwoody Preservation Trust started Lemonade Days to bring Dunwoody together and raise money to replant trees after the 1998 tornado cut through our community. What started as a way to make Lemonade out of Lemons has continued to today. Due to the current outbreak, we are not able to host this event this month. However, please know we are currently working to reschedule this event to later this year. As soon as we have a set date, we will let everyone know. And when we do host the 21st Annual Lemonade Days, please come out and join us as we make More Lemonade out of Lemons.

A Moment in Dunwoody History

DPT has been celebrating the 150th Anniversary of the Donaldson-Bannister Farm this year. We started with a Champagne Concert in January and an Afternoon Tea in early March. While we have had to postpone some of our celebrations, we want to continue to recognize this beautiful, unique home. Today this property is open to all as a City of Dunwoody Park. However, over the years there have been six families to live here and raise their families. From 1946-1956, the Ogdens lived here with their two children Meredith and Hank. Visit our web site and DPT Historian Valerie Biggerstaff's blog to learn more about them.

Interested in visiting the park? While the buildings are currently closed, self-guided tours and a Lemon Scavenger Hunt are available. Paper copies can be found in the kiosk by the barn or online.

Can't make it to the park? Connect with DPT Virtually

Every Friday at noon, DPT Board President MJ Thomas will be live on Facebook from the Donaldson-Bannister Farm for "Fridays at the Farm." Check us out on Facebook to see what she's up to!

Pioneer Cooking - For Adults & Kids

Looking for something to do while quarantined at home? Why not try out some recipes that the pioneers used. (FYI – kids made these at Camp Flashback last year!)
